

Date: May 23, 09:04

😊 Good work by Worldwide Shipping

Recently I moved from Portland, OR to India and used the services of Worldwide Shipping to transfer my goods.

I gave them my goods in the last week of January and received them in Bangalore in the first week of May. It took about 3 months to receive the good seven though I was told it would take about 2 months initially. I think it was delayed a bit because of the origin - Portland, OR. One will receive the goods within 2 months if he lives in a big city in the US. In any case, I did not mind the wait as I had to settle down in Bangalore.

Worldwide was very helpful through out the shipping process. They were knowledgeable and cautious in the approach and have set the correct expectations regarding Customs Duty. Their agent in India was very helpful in clearing the shipment from Customizing BLR. They work well with the customs officials and have taken care of everything in advance. I had good experience with Worldwide overall.

Customs advise: Do not carry too much electronics if you really dont need them all, it just increases the duty amount you have to pay. Also, do not take any electronic items that are not working. Customs does not care if they work or not, you just will have to pay the duty. Even the shipping agent will not be able to do anything.

I paid very little duty as I took only a home computer, a scanner, and a microwave. Please note the duty on your computer will be 60% if you do not take a monitor. On a full system, the duty is 50%. Isn't it funny?

Good luck,
Narendra